'Roselyn Hsueh's book is a tour de force that elevates the standards of comparative political economy. Her argument develops a synoptic and comparative perspective on state priorities, combined with an interactive framework of microlevel sectoral structures and distribution of interested actors.'

Aseema Sinha - Wagener Chair of South Asian Politics and George R. Roberts Fellow, Claremont McKenna College

'Offers a compelling example of how to conduct in-depth research on important cases from different world regions while generating novel theoretical implications for comparative political economy.'

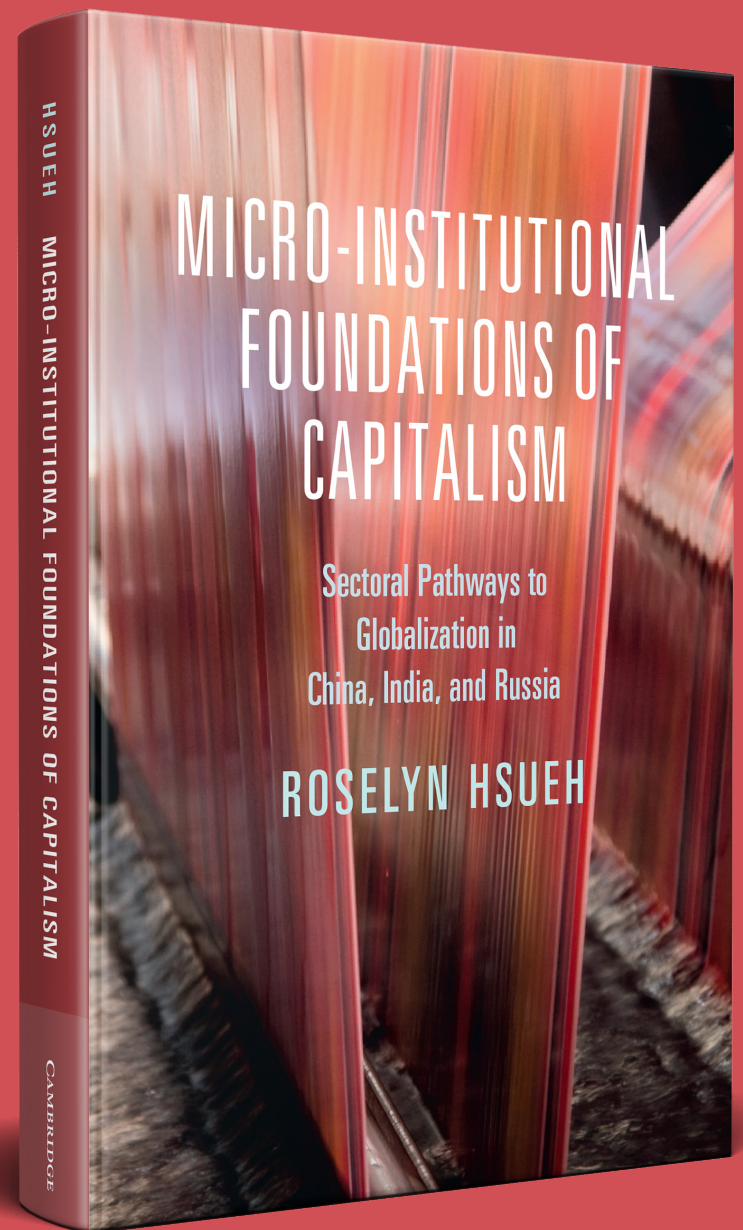

Rudra Sil - Professor of Political Science and Co-Director of the Huntsman Program in International Studies and Business, University of Pennsylvania

'Hsueh's new book on comparative economic governance is brilliant. The book's analysis of multiple sectors in China, India and Russia builds on but goes well beyond existing scholarship on state capacity and economic performance.'

Richard Doner - Professor Emeritus of Political Science, Emory University

'It is a remarkable feat to compare China, India and Russia in a historically serious way, without compromising methodological rigor. Hsueh is one of those rare scholars who have demonstrated that comparative area studies can marry richness with rigor, without compromising either.'

Rahul Mukherji - Professor and Chair, Modern Politics of South Asia, South Asia Institute, Heidelberg University
